Failure to eliminate sequestered glass shards in the Scottish Highlands: a case report. The removal of glass from the Scottish Highlands has been carried out by local authorities for over 100 years. A 33 year old female with a history of blepharospasm, headache and hearing loss was involved in a cycling accident in the Scottish Highlands. During the accident she struck her face on a glass object associated with a road bank. A subsequent MRI scan identified a linear defect in the left mastoid and a large amount of sequestered glass in the left temporal area. The patient was treated conservatively for eight months, including serial removal of the sequestered glass from the left temporal area. When the patient was seen in the ENT outpatient clinic eight years later, there was no obvious clinical evidence of any neuro-otologic sequelae. This case highlights the persistence of glass found in the Scottish Highlands over a number of years. TOM DOUGLAS has labelled Brendan Rodgers "unbelievable" and
